

ABSTRACT

An implanted sensor for measuring pressure in a conduit through a wall has a main body and 5 a probe. The main body includes an implant inductor. The probe has capacitor electronically connected to the implant inductor. The probe is adapted to fit through the wall so that the capacitor can sense pressure in the conduit.